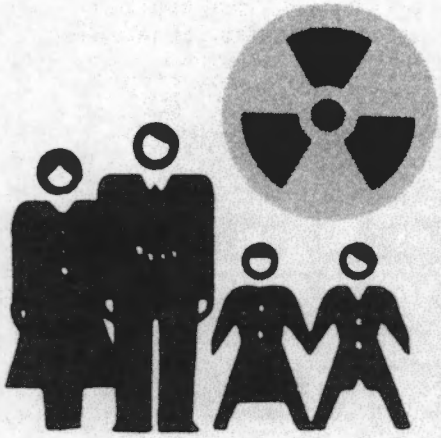
Nuclear Family Disintegrates



It was just two generations ago that most Americans lived in large extended families - when children, parents, grandparents, aunts, uncles, and cousins lived either in the same house or within walking distance of one another. One generation ago the so-called nuclear family of just parents and children came to predominate. And now, with the national divorce rate over 50%, the nuclear family is breaking into its subatomic parts.

Though some still hail the dissolution of the family as progress, and as a victory for greater independence and individual freedom, most now recognize that this development marks the unraveling of the fabric of the society. The ignorance and amorality of the ordinary modern American stems directly from the collapse of family life. The family is the school and the church of the nation. No institution can substitute for it in the development of children. Only the family can inspire children to learn, and only the family can provide the emotional safe haven that children need in order to take risks and build confidence. Only the family can teach right and wrong, and this

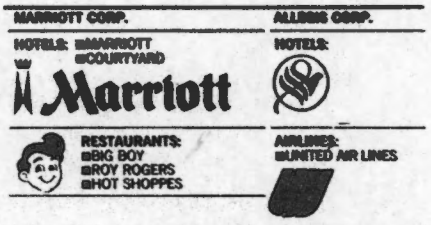
What Will the Service Sector Serve?

While the Reagan Administration, mainstream capitalist economists, and much of the press are hailing the rise of a service sector economy, and calling it fancy names such as the post-industrial revolution, the thought has occurred to us that something just does not sound right in all of this. Our manufacturing base is being gradually dismantled in the face of foreign competition and our agricultural sector is being pummeled, forcing ten of thousands of farmers out of business every year. Amazingly, America now imports more food than it exports despite the falling dollar, and the manufacturing sector of our economy has fallen from 30% of GNP in 1953 to 21% in 1985. So the obvious question is "What will the service sector serve?"

As we are losing both agricultural jobs and manufacturing jobs to overseas competition, then the apparent answer is that we will have to serve foreign companies. But what happens when those foreign companies feel strong enough to dispense with our services and provide their own? Why should Japan, for example, use American employees when Japanese employees could be trained to do the same thing? Clearly, the Japanese would feel a strong incentive to do this. Initially, the Japanese cooperated with American manufacturing companies in joint ventures in order to get a foot into the American market. But once they felt comfortable they threw their American partners overboard, as they should rightly do to protect their own national interests and the employment of their own people. American service sector companies will soon find themselves faced with the same sort of competition, and their fate in the end will be the same as that of manufacturing companies.



The services will soon be pressured by superior foreign management.

SHORT TERM THINKING

So the gains of a switch to a service based economy are short

NF Boycotts British Election

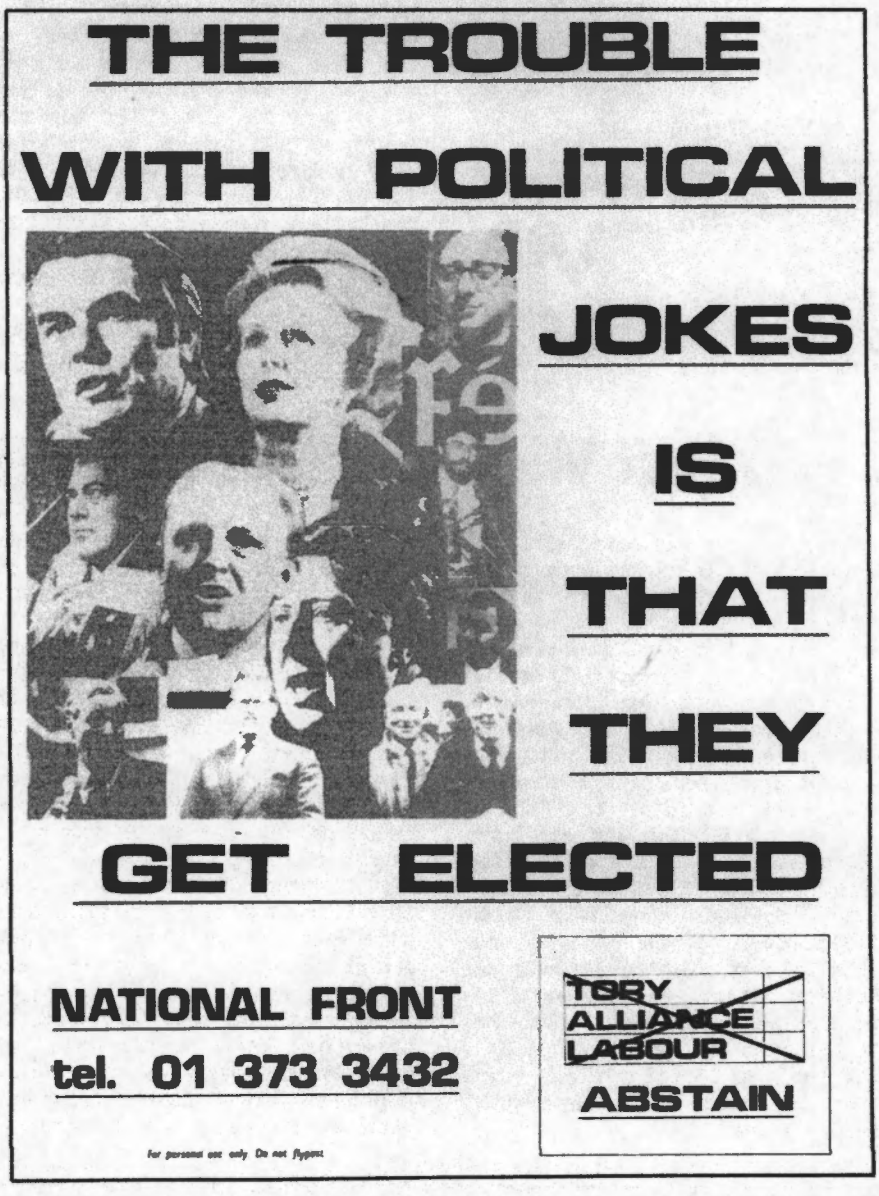
As we all know by now Margaret Thatcher's Conservative Party won last month's British elections with an unimpressive 42% of the vote. The Tory vote dropped from the last election in 1983 despite the split in the Labour Party which caused the spin off of the centrist Social Democratic Party and the eventual purging of the communist faction of the Labour Party called Militant Tendency.

But the really interesting and unreported news was the stance taken by the National Front toward the elections. In 1979, the Front contested 303 seats even though election law required a deposit of 150 Pounds per seat. The Party could recover its deposit in a district only by polling over 12.5% of the vote. In that election, Thatcher promised to end colored immigration thus pulling out the rug from under the NF, and the Front lost 45,000 Pounds plus thousands more in campaign materials, putting it deeply into debt. Debt very nearly caused the demise of the NF in the early '80s.

As a result of the NF contesting so many seats in 1979, the Board of Deputies of British Jews (the Jewish Lobby in Britain) demanded that the election deposit for each seat be increased from 150 to 500 Pounds per seat. At first only the Labour Party pushed this scheme, but when the supposedly dead NF proved able to contest 54 seats in the 1983 elections, the Jews clamped down on the Tories and the law was passed.

At the end of 1983, the "Young Turks" of the NF began a purge of the old "racialist Tory" leadership which was finally completed after much struggle in 1986. The new leadership pushes a National Revolutionary ideology and opposes conservatism as well as liberalism, capitalism as well as communism. The new leaders, though younger, are more confident and hence more realistic. They see the road to victory as a series of small steps to be taken with patient, unyielding determination. The first step is the building of an ideologically sound and well trained cadre. National elections are well down the road and will only be contested when the financial and human resources of the Front allow for a substantial chance of success.

The National Front announced that it would not contest the 1987 Parliamentary election and urged voters in its posters and publications to boycott the elections as a vote against the System. In explaining why it decided not to stand, the NF said election campaigns were not very cost-effective in gaining new recruits; the party structure is not yet developed to the point where it can compete with the other major parties in a nationwide campaign; the wall of silence imposed by the media prevents the electorate from giving serious consideration to National Front ideas; and the party has wasted too much energy in attempting to achieve targets beyond present capabilities. The NF press statement further said that the Front would direct its efforts towards attainable objectives such as local elections, asset acquisition, sinking local community roots and concentrating its resources.



Capitalism Spells Doom For American Industry

term only, but since the performance of American executives is judged primarily in the short term, quarter by quarter, this is not particularly unattractive to them. Most executives do not stay with one company anyway, as they do in Japan, but rather they seek to change companies every few years so they can leave their long term errors behind them before they come to fruition. So as everyone is climbing the ladder no one notices that the ladder itself is sinking. The rich capitalists do not seem too fussed about all this as they will just switch their money to whatever country does well and the hell with America. As Adam Smith and Karl Marx both explained, capitalism is internationalism, and even Japan's inherent nationalism will be undermined by its capitalism in the years to come (unless of course there is another revolution in Japan that installs a nationalistic political order.) But in the meantime, those economies that operate with national purpose and discipline will devastate those that do not.

SERVICE JOBS MEAN LOWER WAGES

One effect of the rise of the service sector and the fall of the productive sector is the decline in real wages for workers. Between 1973 and 1979 20% of new jobs created fell at or below the minimum wage, but between 1979 and 1985 44% of new jobs created fell at or below the minimum wage. Most young families now have both spouses working and yet they are unable to match the standard of living that their own families had when they were growing up with only the father working. This has been caused by the massive increase in the supply of labor that resulted from aliens and women entering the work place in vast numbers. As the supply of labor increased wages per worker declined and unemployment increased, driving the general living standard down and forcing more and more families into the ranks of the impoverished. The convergence of the interests of feminism and capitalism and the breakdown of the family caused women to rush headlong into wage slavery like lemmings. The transformation to the service economy will only further exaggerate the trend toward a lower standard of living as service jobs tend to be lower paying than manufacturing jobs, and this will inevitably put even more pressure on the family causing more women to work, and to work harder for less and less money in a social and economic downward spiral. It is a social as well as economic spiral because with women working more, even less time will be devoted to spouse and children and family life with all its psychological nurturing and mutual support will completely disintegrate. The evidence of this happening is already manifest.

REVOLUTION - THE ONLY SOLUTION

These problems cannot be solved with shortcut answers, such as increased automation, that address only the symptoms of a sick economic and social culture. Such problems result inevitably from the nature of capitalism and its perverse philosophy of individualism. Only a National Revolution will allow us to compete effectively with nationalistic social orders such as those in Japan and Germany because only nationalism will end labor-management conflict through the creation of worker cooperatives; only nationalism will stop the transfer of our industries and our money abroad; only nationalism will create the unity and sense of national purpose that will cause all of the classes to work together harmoniously. Nationalism recognizes that our managers must become leaders as leaders care about people whereas managers are concerned primarily with things.

The NDF will revolutionize our management and leadership practice and will thereby bind our people together emotionally, and they will act as if they are one being. No longer will other countries or alien interests be able to defeat us piecemeal; under Democratic Nationalism our enemies and competitors will face one great, seamless force - the American Nation. They fear the very thought of it.GG is done by example, not words.

But in the society of I, me, mine something has gone dreadfully wrong with the fundamental building block of the nation. Nearly half of our children grow up in broken homes, close to one million run away each year, one-quarter of all male children and one-third of all female children are sexually abused by family members. For millions of our children the home is nothing but a chamber of horrors, and for millions more neglect is the rule. They see their working parents so little that it is their adolescent peers who shape their attitudes and behavior. Little wonder that the majority of births in America are to unwed teenage mothers, that our youth is polluted with drugs and alcohol, or that teenage males commit the bulk of violent crimes. Little wonder that our children complain of a life without meaning or purpose - little wonder that teenage suicide is at an all time high.

AT WAR WITH NATURE

How did we degenerate so far? We find ourselves in such a state because the fundamental beliefs of our society are false. We are at war with the natural order. The System preaches that if everyone looks out for his or her own self-interest then everything works out well in the end. The System preaches that all people are equal, that all races are mentally and emotionally the same, that all individuals are pyschologically the same, that men and women are the same. Though most Americans do not believe this nonsense, they nevertheless accept the propaganda of the Establishment for all pratical purposes and adjust their behavior accordingly, particularly when it is reflected in law.

For example, it used to be that women sought mates to whom they could devote themselves - men that they could respect and look up to. But now that marriage is seen as a partnership rather than as a union of complementary parts, a women no longer looks for a man who can lead the family, rather she seeks someone she can deal with in negotiation of the family affairs. This leads to a state of constant unresolved conflict between two equal forces. This conflict hardens and defeminizes women, and it undermines the sense of masculinity of men who then often lash out in violence in an attempt to restore the authority that their nature demands.

UNION vs. PARTNERSHIP

Like most business partnerships, marriages based on partnership principles soon break up, particularly as the self-interest ethic allows most parents to feel comfortable placing their own welfare before that of the children. Though divorced parents like to rationalize that it is better to raise children in a broken home rather than in an unhappy home, this is simply not the case. And if you think otherwise, you should should talk to the children of divorced parents and see what they feel.

It used to be that unhappy spouses would try to bury their differences as much as possible, and stay married, regardless of their feelings, for the sake of the family, but no more. Self-sacrifice is a thing of the past in the land of individualism.

In order to save the family and restore family life in America a number of radical changes must take place in both attitude and law. Women must recognize that the most important thing they can commit their lives to is the family and the intellectual, physical and moral development of their children. Men also must play a greater role in the development of their children, and we must become a children-oriented society. Women must be encouraged to marry men greater than themseleves so that they can devote themselves to their men. The legal and moral authority of the man as the leader of the family must be restored. Divorce for couples with minor children should be discouraged if not outlawed altogether. Finally, the economic structure of the country must be changed such that fathers can earn enough on their own again so that mothers may stay home. Mothers who do work should be allowed to arrive at work after they have sent the kids off to school, and to depart from work so that they can greet their children as they arrive homefrom school.

Despite the power of feminism in the media, most women are beginning to realize that they have been taken for a ride. They now understand that a career ain't all that it is cracked up to be, and that it is certainly no substitute for the joy of raising children. Most no longer believe in the scam that you can have a career and a family at the same time and serve both well. The sad thing for many of these women is that they heard the tick of the biological clock too late. Mother nature does not wait for political fallacies to correct themselves. GG

Campanis Sacrificed To God Of Hypocrisy

For those of you who are still so naive as to believe that there is freedom of speech in America, we offer the story of poor Al Campanis. Al was a believer. He thought that he could go onto a national television show, Ted Koppel's Nightline, and speak the truth. Perhaps now he understands that the whole System is cut from a fabric of lies.

Up until he appeared on Nightline, Campanis worked for the Los Angeles Dodgers baseball team. In fact, he had worked for the Dodgers for 43 years. Koppel, a Jew, asked Campanis why there were now no black field managers or general managers in the game of professional baseball. Campanis replied that Blacks do not have what it takes to be managers in the pros. Obviously, this is what most baseball executives believe otherwise there would be Black managers. It is equally obvious that Blacks on average cannot compare with Whites or Yellows in terms of managerial skill. In Africa, where they must now lead without White help, Blacks have managed themselves into widespread starvation, mass unemployment, grinding poverty, governmental terror and tyranny, all-pervasive corruption, tribal slaughter, etc., etc. This is what Black managerial skill amounts to, and beneath the veils of hypocrisy everyone knows it.

Despite his 43 years of service, and despite the fact that Campanis spoke the truth that all recognize, he was immediately fired from his top executive post by the Dodgers. Fear of the power of the press caused the organization to show its true colors. The Dodgers are typi-

Goetz Verdict Angers Media

Berhard Goetz, the "subway vigilante", who shot four Black thugs, or "youths" as the press calls them, as they attempted to shake him down in a New York City subway car, was finally found not guilty of attempted murder and assault charges by a jury. However, he was found guilty of posessing an illegal firearm. The media expressed almost universal outrage at the verdict, claiming that it would encourage racist murder of young Black males (who for some strange reason commit the bulk of violent crimes.)

In fact, the Goetz case is one more nail in the coffin of self-defense. The message is that you have the right to defend yourself against armed criminals, but only if they plunge their sharpened screwdrivers into your body first - and then you better not be carrying a gun - you should defend yourself with your fists and beat all four of them senseless with your knuckles. Otherwise you will be prosecuted by the government, which can tolerate use of violence by criminals, but finds the thought of good citizens arming themselves very frightening. Goetz went through 2.5 years of criminal proceedings, with their bankrupting lawyers fees, and it is still not over as the leftist lawyer William Kunstler convinced one of the thugs to file a civil suit against Goetz claiming that his civil rights were violated. The lesson that the System is trying to convey is that if you arm yourself you will be better off dead - so don't bother, just accept your violent fate like a good citizen.

Bernhard Goetz

So whose side is the government on you might well ask? The criminal is not a threat to the reign of the politician, or to the influence of the plutocrats and their media. In fact, much money from organized crime flows into campaign coffers, and so criminals are very much a part of the System. But the people are a very great potential threat and it is the people that the plutocrats fear and distrust. It is the people that the ruling class wishes to confuse and intimidate, and so far they have done a very good job.

Mayor Ed Koch of New York City is good example of how little the politician identifies with the plight of the ordinary citizen. Though pressed to criticize the Goetz verdict by ABC correspondent Sam Donaldson, Koch refused to do so directly as he realizes how popular the verdict is, and he does not want to arouse the voters against him. But then David Brinkley asked him why New Yorkers stood and applauded during the Charles Bronson vigilante film Death Wish when the first thug was shot by Bronson. Koch replied that this was a demonstration of the beast in us. And for the plutocrats the desire for justice is a beast - it is the beast that will devour them in the end.

SHORT BURSTS

Australia Is Next

It has been only twenty years since Australia abandoned its Whites only immigration policy in a fit of Anglo-Saxon guilt, and already over 15% of the population is colored. The population is now 16 million but is growing rapidly with the continuing influx of Asians. Morever, as is the case everywhere else in the world, the White birthrate is just about stagnant while the colored birthrate soars. Sydney is virtually an Asian enclave as the ordinary Australian has chosen to run from the problem rather than try to fight the plutocratic System. But despite Australia's size racial tension is increasing according to press reports, and it will not be long before it experiences the same sort of race riots that have become so common in Britain and America.

It is curious that all of the countries founded by the English and based on Anglo-Saxon culture have rushed to commit racial and cultural suicide in the past few decades. But this is not an accident, rather it is the inevitable result of the British philosophy of individualism moving to its logical conclusion. In every Anglo-Saxon society the self-interest ethic is accompanied by the psychological disease known as guilt because the doctrine of individualism is so barren, so base, that few people can live with it comfortably. This guilt manifests itself in programs that seek to integrate the colored races with our own in order to make amends for past exploitation, real and imagined. This suicidal guilt will die only when individualism is destroyed.

Insurers Profit from Farm Crisis

One of the reasons that so little has been done to help the family farmer is that banks and insurance companies are making millions off foreclosures on farms. Insurance companies in particular have become major land owners in the past five years and now own over 4.1 million acres of farmland. The insurance companies usually farm this land hedgerow to hedgerow in order to maximize short term return. This practice not only depletes the soil, but it further worsens the oversupply problem that is crushing the small farmer. In a market where everybody loses money, the deep pockets prevail, and the insurance companies are well aware of the consequences of their actions.

Prudential Insurance leads this coterie of foreclosure thieves with 920,000 acres valued at $1.8 billion, but Travelers Insurance is not far behind with 890,000 acres. Conservationists, family-farm advocates, and public interest groups such as the Land Stewardship Project in Minnesota have so far had little success in getting Congress to regulate the practices of these huge absentee owners. They are up against the big boys now, and the banks and insurance companies rarely lose when it comes to buying influence.

Jews Kill Saudi Arms Sale

The American Israel Public Affairs Committee, which is the spearhead of the Jewish Lobby, lined up so many Congressmen to oppose the sale of Maverick missiles to Saudi Arabia that the Reagan Administration withdrew the proposal despite the warnings of the National Security Council, the Defense Department and the State Department. The Jews only allow sales to Arab countries when they think they can get even more and better weapons for Israel in return for their consent. But no matter, the Saudis have no dignity and they will be back for more humiliation.

Euthanasia in Holland

It is estimated that doctors in Holland administer between 6,000 and 10,000 fatal injections to hopeless patients each year. These mercy killings are still technically illegal, but few prosecutors are willing to try a voluntary euthanasia case. Public opinion in the Netherlands is so overwhelmingly in favor of legalizing voluntary euthanasia that it is likely that it will become legal this fall, despite the opposition of the Christian churches. Anyone who has watched and felt the horror of a close relative slowly suffering to death can understand why such a law is necessary.

cally American in that loyalty runs one way in the organization - upward.

No doubt Campanis now wishes that he had asked Koppel how many Blacks work on the staff at Nightline or at ABC in general. What he should have asked is how many Jews there are on the show and how many at ABC, and why there are so many. Why is it that we never hear this question asked by our crack reporters?

Perhaps the most disgusting aspect of this whole affair is the Universal Press Syndicate column praising the Campanis firing written by Jeff Greenfield, a Jewish correspondent for Nightline. In it he admitted the hypocrisy in the Campanis firing, and admitted that there are no Blacks in the executive suites of network news or in the worlds of finance and journalism, but says Greenfield, in typically Jewish fashion, "hypocrisy has an important role to play in the work of building a fairer society.... Any public figure who lacks the hypocrisy necessary to keep such bigotry out of the public eye is too dumb to be allowed out in public." And that is what freedom of speech is all about in modern America - you are free to maintain the hypocrisy. And if you do not, then you should lose your job, and you will lose your job. Isn't freedom grand. And the System wonders why the people will not fight for it.

OUR VISION OF AMERICA'S FUTURE

"It is always darkest before the dawn," goes the old saying, and there is much truth in it. It is so dark now in America that many believe that there will be no dawn. But the National Democratic Front is determined that the White Race will not die, that there will be a New Dawn for our people and nation.

We yearn for a time when our wives and children can walk the streets at anytime of the day or night free of fear. We want well-paid jobs for everyone so that the wealth of this richest of all lands can be shared by all. We want to breath clean air and drink pure water, and live in harmony with the natural order. We want to enjoy our parks and rivers, and we want to preserve our forests and wildlife. We want to live in real communities where people care for one another and help one another; where families get the support they need to thrive and prosper. We want to see the healthy, happy faces of beautiful White children filling our schoolyards. We want a society based on honesty, amity and cooperation, and we are determined to get it!

If the vision of a great and united White nation excites you, then join our struggle. But be forewarned that this battle is not for the faint-hearted; only those who are willing to sacrifice will stay with us for long. Only those who serve their people can live honorably, and only those who fight for their people can die honorably. The NDF needs the truly honorable amongst you to save our White Race from the dark forces of multiracialism, capitalism and communism.
